

STIFLING HEAT CLAIMS VICTIMS.

Two Deaths and Many Prostrations Reported—Humidity and Soft Coal Smoke Add to People's Suffering.

WEATHER FORECAST.
Forecast for the thirty-six hours ending at 8 P. M. Tuesday for New York City and vicinity: Heavy thunderstorms with rain and cooler this evening or to-night; Tuesday rain, followed by fair; southeast winds and squalls, shifting to northwest.

TEMPERATURE.
11 A. M. . . . . 80
12 Noon . . . . . 82
1 P. M. . . . . 84
5 P. M. . . . . 80

DEATHS.
Patrick Glavey, fifty-seven years old; died at his home, No. 321 West Sixty-seventh street.

William E. Masterson, four years old, of No. 414 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street.

PROSTRATIONS.
Ryan, Thomas, nineteen years old, of No. 263 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, at No. 156 East One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street. Attended by an ambulance surgeon and went home.

Kenney, Frank, twenty-seven years old, of No. 143 West Ninety-third street, overcome at No. 27 East Fourth street; St. Vincent's Hospital.

BEATTIE, CHARLES, thirty-two, no home; overcome at Thirty-third street and Third avenue; Bellevue Hospital.

CANFIELD, WILLIAM, forty-three, No. 505 West Twenty-seventh street; walked into Bellevue Hospital, where it was found that he was on the verge of collapse from the heat.

DEGAN, THOMAS, fifty-seven, City Island; overcome at Twenty-sixth street and Second avenue; taken to Bellevue.

Mrs. Gummell, twenty years old, living at Twenty-second street and Eleventh avenue, overcome at No. 241 West Twenty-sixth street; Roosevelt Hospital.

While the mercury at no time came near the record mark to-day, it was nevertheless a day of suffering and discomfort.

The humidity was excessive and this, together with the soft coal smoke and clouds all over the city, made the atmosphere next to unbearable.

Gloomy, foggy clouds crept out of the West shortly after noon, but no relief came with them.

Heavy thunderstorms are predicted for to-night.

Storm warnings are displayed along the Atlantic coast from Baltimore to New York.

President Confers on Southern Appointments with Head of Tuskegee.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Booker Washington, of Tuskegee, Ala., to-day held a lengthy conference with President Roosevelt upon the subject of Southern appointments.

DISBROW MYSTERY NOT YET CLEARED BY THE POLICE.

His body strike the water, rise, float down a short distance and disappear.

"This photograph is as good a likeness of the body as you could get. In my opinion there is no question that it is the same. This suicide was five feet, seven or eight inches tall, well built, and weighed about 175 pounds. He wore a dark sack coat, rather long, dark trousers and no vest. He had on a black derby hat. He was clean shaven, with dark hair. His face seemed just a trifle fuller than the picture shows, but that is the only difference."

BODY IN SOUND LOOKS LIKE THAT OF LOUIS DISBROW.

The body of a young man was washed ashore at Whitestone, Point, L. I., to-day which the Long Island City police say shows somewhat closely the description of Louis A. Disbrow.

The drowned man was about twenty-nine years of age, five feet seven inches in height, weighed 160 pounds, smooth-faced, hair and eyes brown, complexion fair. The body had been in the water only a short time. The man wore a blue outing shirt, dark striped trousers and laced shoes.

The finding of this body and the policeman's identification of the bridge jumper as Disbrow is somewhat perplexing to the authorities, who are working on both clues.

NO ACTION YET BY THE OFFICIALS AT GOOD GROUND.

(Special to The Evening World.)

GOOD GROUND, June 16.—District Attorney Livingston Smith did not arrive here on any of the early trains. Coroner Nugent, who was awaiting him to hold a conference with a view of deciding upon some course of action, went away shortly after noon.

"If Mrs. Smith wants the body of Clarence Foster disinterred and an autopsy made it can be done," said Coroner Nugent. "I myself do not think it necessary, and I know the county will not stand for any unnecessary expense. These stories about the boy being

ADAMS JUROR APPROACHED? POLICY KING VERY ILL.

Talesman Tells Court He Believes an Attempt Was Made to Bribe Him—Marked Money Played in Policy Shops Traced to Adams's Coeffers.

The first sensation of the trial of Policy King "Al" Adams was caused this afternoon by John S. Frost, a talesman, who was drawn to fill the eleventh place in the jury-box. Frost gave his business as that of a superintendent at No. 136 Liberty street.

"Al" Adams to the Bar. (Sketch in court to-day by T. E. Powers.)

In reply to questions by Mr. Schurman he said that a man in the courtroom had approached him and tried to draw him out on the merits of the case.

After standing up and looking around the courtroom, on the suggestion of Attorney Ridgway, Mr. Frost could not pick the man out.

Then Mr. Schurman led Mr. Frost to the back of the room. There Mr. Ridgway took hold of Attorney Charles P. Blaney, for the Gooddard Anti-Policy Society, and asked Frost:

"Isn't this the man?"

Mr. Schurman objected. "Come back to your seats, gentlemen," said Justice Scott. Frost said he was unable to see the man who had spoken to him, and after further questioning he was accepted by both sides and made the eleventh juror chosen.

Adams's friends are apprehensive of his condition. His physician, according to Lawyer Ridgway, says Adams has diabetes and his condition is such as to warrant the greatest precaution being taken.

"Mr. Adams's doctor told me," said Mr. Ridgway, "that if Mr. Adams's trial was delayed sixty days longer, there would be no trial at all. In short, his doctor has little hope for him."

Adams is said to weigh sixty pounds less than when he was arrested.

One very important piece of evidence in the possession of the District Attorney is a bundle of greenbacks—marked money—taken in the raid on Adams's place.

This marked money had, days before the raid, been put in circulation through policy shops by agents of the Society for the Prevention of Crime.

They played policy with the marked money. Their policy ventures were undertaken in shops remote from the alleged headquarters of the Policy King.

When the raid was made an examination of the money seized revealed the presence of the marked greenbacks.

Accompanied by his lawyers, James W. Ridgway, former District Attorney of Brooklyn, and "Jimmy" Oliver, "Dolph" Jantzen, who is commonly reputed to be "Al" Adams's first lieutenant, the "Policy King" came into court smiling. He was greeted by several friends and returned their handshakes warmly. He was joined soon by his son, "Al" Adams, Jr.

Questions to Talesman.
Assistant District Attorney Schurman's examination of each prospective juror was interesting. Here are some of the questions he asked:

"Have you any prejudice against the law pertaining to policy-playing?"

"Do you know Al Adams, the defendant?"

"Did you ever make deposits in the West Side Bank, or do you know any of the officers of that bank?"

"Are you prejudiced against societies engaged in enforcing the laws against gambling?"

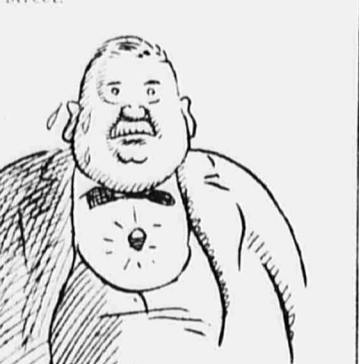

"Do you know one Thomas Draper, otherwise known as Shanty Draper?"

"Al" Adams made many deposits in the West Side Bank, and it was because they did not hold it long enough, I made some at their house one day, and they agree with me that Postum is a delicious beverage, and while, of course, the flavor and taste is pleasing and we are glad Postum does suit us that way, the great advantage is in the wonderful, bounding health that we have recovered."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"Al" Adams, Jr., Facing the Future

Crowhurst on Stand, Corroborating Fair Divorce Defendant, Stirred to Anger.

Ernest H. Crowhurst, the principal co-respondent named by Frederick N. Innes in his suit for an absolute divorce from George Innes, was called to the witness stand before Justice Blachoff and a jury in the Supreme Court to-day and denied the charges made by the bandmaster.

Mrs. Innes was recalled to the witness stand and Mr. Hummel continued his cross-examination. She reiterated her previous testimony regarding the occasion when she says her husband threatened to kill her unless she signed a confession; she refused to accede to his demands and defied him to kill her.

Do you recognize that writing, is it yours?"

"I can't say," was the reply.

"Have you any doubt about its being your handwriting?"

"Yes, I have."

"Did of You Some Way?"

James Cochrane, a lawyer, was called. He said he had known Mrs. Innes for fifteen years.

"By appointment I met both George and Fred in Innes's office in February of last year. As I went in I saw Fred pacing the floor, recalcitrating and talking loudly. I cried:

"You shall confess! Sign! I shall be rid of you some way."

"George was crying. I told Fred I was in a hard position—counsel to George and a friend to him. I assured him George was guilty of no wrong except that she had been indiscreet. He replied that he would be free anyway, either by getting a divorce or by giving her proof against him so she might get a divorce."

"I saw no pistol, but there was a big disturbance."

Mr. Hummel showed Mr. Cochrane a letter and asked him if he recognized it. Cochrane created some commotion among Mrs. Innes's friends and counsel by saying:

"It is signed Fred H. Innes, but I cannot swear to his writing. I was never sure about telling the difference between Fred and George Innes's handwriting."

"One day I got a letter inclosing another sealed one addressed to Fred Innes. The letter purported to be from Mrs. Innes. She asked me to hand the inclosure to Fred. He came to the office and asked for it. I refused it, saying it was not my pocket and I should stay there until I returned it to George, with the advice that she should not send it to Innes. I refused to be an instrument."

"He Caught Me by the Throat."

"Innes leaped at me, caught me by the throat and tried to force me to give it up. I resisted successfully, crying for the police. Then Innes left."

Lawyer Hoffman, contrary to expectations, then called to the stand. In the case, Ernest H. Crowhurst, Crowhurst took the stand.

"You are the co-respondent in this case?"

"I am."

"Are the charges of Mr. Innes against you true?"

"Absolutely false."

"Were you at any time guilty of intimate relations with Mrs. Innes?"

"Never."

Crowhurst gave at length his version of his visit to Mrs. Innes in the Hotel Walton. It was the same as that which the defendant told the jury. He said the famous love letters from Crowhurst to Mrs. Innes were then shown to him. He related the story of their being written.

Mrs. Innes begged me to write her some love letters, so Innes would find them. I objected and went away. She kept at me, writing and telephoning until I agreed to aid her.

I then wrote a letter. She returned it to me, saying it was not strong enough to arouse Mr. Innes's jealousy. I then wrote a second, stronger letter, modelling it after the first."

"I never receive visitors at my home," said Crowhurst.

INNES CO-RESPONDENT IS GOADED TO DESPERATION.

Crowhurst on Stand, Corroborating Fair Divorce Defendant, Stirred to Anger.

I then wrote a letter. She returned it to me, saying it was not strong enough to arouse Mr. Innes's jealousy. I then wrote a second, stronger letter, modelling it after the first."

"I never receive visitors at my home," said Crowhurst.

In describing his visit to Mrs. Innes Crowhurst had a hard time to keep his temper under Lawyer Hummel's grueling cross-examination.

"While in Mrs. Innes's room there was a knock on the door," said Crowhurst. Mrs. Innes opened the door and I heard some one say: 'You've a man in your room. It's against the hotel rules.'"

"And who did this man say?" asked Mr. Hummel derisively.

"The man sat still and said nothing," replied the witness, with much heat. He denied that he had been spoken to by the hotel people.

After a while Mr. Hummel so irritated Crowhurst by his persistent questioning regarding the "call down" by the hotel waiter, with much heat, the witness swore never happened, that Justice Blachoff was forced to warn Crowhurst personally that he was too excited.

"Don't get excited," said the Justice. "Contain yourself," he added, as Crowhurst shouted "No! No!" as loudly as he could at Mr. Hummel.

Mrs. Innes watched and listened to all this with no attempt to conceal her own pain.

Blushes Like a Schoolgirl.
Crowhurst is a big, husky fellow. When Mr. Hummel showed him the most gushing of the love letters, and asked what the five crosses under the signature meant, Crowhurst blushed like a schoolgirl. He was too much embarrassed by saying:

"Mr. Hummel made the big man weep by adding:

"I have written these letters simply to oblige Mrs. Innes, with never a thought of the violation of the sanctity of your own home."

"Never a thought," said Crowhurst solemnly, with never a look at Mrs. Innes.

Mrs. Innes was very chipper when the case opened in the morning. After a recess she was worried. Several points in the case were related a bit differently by Crowhurst than by Mrs. Innes. He said the woman wrote him first, giving him her recipe for a warm gushing love letter.

Mr. Hummel asked what became of that letter. Crowhurst didn't know, although he admitted he had hesitated to enter the conspiracy because it was so novel and he didn't know what might come from it.

Crowhurst's testimony closed Mrs. Innes's defense to the suit.

BORGES A POOR SHOT.

Italian Aimed at One Man and Fatally Wounded Another.

Mike Borges, twenty-seven years old, of No. 19 Dennot place, Brooklyn, was held without bail to-day in the Myrtle Avenue Court to await the result of injuries upon Mike Boltoma, of No. 267 First avenue. Boltoma is in the Brooklyn Hospital suffering from two pistol wounds in the back caused by the poor marksmanship of Borges.

Borges was in the saloon of Antonio Cestaro, No. 263 First street, when he had a quarrel with the proprietor. He chased Cestaro into the street and fired two shots at him from a revolver. Both bullets struck Boltoma, who was standing on the sidewalk. He was taken to the hospital, where his condition is considered critical.
